About our goats.....We raise Nubian dairy goats, selected for their rich, creamy milk. Goats are friendly, intelligent animals who enjoy human company and are willing participants in many activities. The does compete to be first to milk; pushing and shoving to secure their places in the milk line.

Contrary to popular belief, goats are surprisingly picky eaters, although lacking hands, they investigate everything with their mouths. Being curious, they want to investigate everything. Another mistaken impression is that goats are smelly. While the bucks have a strong, musky aroma, the does have virtually no smell at all.

Our goats love being scratched and petted, each has a name and knows it. Goats are wonderful utility animals. They are easily handled and are good company. They clear brush and weeds with enthusiasm, making efficient use of rough terrain and forages other livestock are unable to consume. Goats produce sweet, creamy, delicious, nutritious and easily-digested milk. Besides, there's nothing cuter than a baby goat!

"Goat milk makes your butt better!"

Fat Bottom Farm

Handcrafted Goat Milk Soaps

Soothing natural goodness from pampered Nubian goats!

About our soaps

Our soaps are handcrafted natural soaps made in small batches using the cold-process method. Our recipes are carefully researched, then tested thoroughly on children, friends, and co-workers; NEVER on animals! We only vegetable oils, beeswax, high-quality fragrances and essential oils, with botanical ingredients in every bar. Not to mention, of course, our own fresh goat's milk. We buy local and Texas-grown ingredients whenever possible, and grow or pick some ourselves.

Soap is created by a chemical process called saponification: combining fats and oils with a strong base (sodium hydroxide or lye), in the presence of a liquid. In appearance, depending upon the additives used, true handcrafted milk-based soaps will range from creamy in color to very dark brown; giving them a wonderful, earthy appearance.

Once poured into molds and hardened, the soap is hand-cut into bars weighing about 4 ounces. We do very little trimming; our bars tend to be slightly irregular, but we think you deserve every last bit of the soap you purchase.

After cutting, the bars are allowed to cure for several weeks, pH tested, then packaged in our signature rustic wrappers. They are then ready to provide a luxurious bathing experience. Enjoy!

Our ingredients....

Before adding the botanical, conditioning, and herbal ingredients listed in the soap descriptions, our soaps begin with saponified vegetable oils.

Base oils are added to a mixture of our creamy goat milk and sodium hydroxide and mixed until saponification is complete.

Our base oils have been carefully selected and proportioned to produce soaps that meet our goals for lathering, hardness, and conditioning. These base oils include:

- Coconut oil...for bubbles, bubbles, bubbles! We love bubbles! The more coconut oil in a soap, the more bubbles you get and the harder the soap. By itself or without conditioning oils, however, coconut oil may be a bit drying; so other oils are included in the mix.
- Soybean oil...for smooth and stable lather without dryness
- Olive oil...not a great latherer, but it adds great mildness and skin-loving qualities.
- Castor oil...adds smooth creaminess to the lather

In addition, each of our soaps contain beeswax...we like it for the silky feel it adds and the way it seems to help seal moisture into the skin. Tocopherols (a form of Vitamin E) are also added as preservative to maintain the qualities of the conditioning oils not utilized during saponification.

Please examine our ingredients carefully...if you are allergic to any of them...please don't use our soaps! We'll forgive you!
